FORMER MONK SLAIN BY FRIEND

Bonnano After Leaving the Franciscan Order Took Role of Faith Healer.

FAILED IN ONE CASE.

Detectives Believe He Was Then Killed in Sicilian Way for Revenge.

To-day's developments in the mystery of the murder of Vincenzo Bonnano, the aged faith healer, who was found murdered and mutilated yesterday aftermoon in a room in the tenement at No. 285 East Twenty-ninth street, prove that the crime was committed between 1.30 o'clock and 9 o'clock yesterday morning. Lieut. Petrosino has led up in his investigations to what he believes was the cause of the murder.

Old Bonnano, a former Franciscan monk, living at No. 217 Mulberry street, treated hundreds of Sicilians, mainly ing method. His simple friends be-Beved that, because of his former religious affiliations, he was a holy man and that the touch of his hand and the power of his prayers went far to combat disease.

Slain for Revenge.

Petrosino believes that Bonnano failed in his treatment of a woman or a child at some recent time and that band, determined upon revenge in a characteristically Sicilian way. A room was rented in the Twenty-ninth street tenement. Old Bonnano out. was told that a patient awaited him there. He called per appointment and and jewelry he carried.

at 7.30 o'clock walking rapidly in Mulberry street, between Spring and station of the Third avenue "L" on the Bowery to catch a train for uptown. The trip between where he was than twenty minutes.

One of the women tenants in the Twenty-nirth street house, passing through the hallway abutting on the room in which Bonnano was murdered, at home or abroad. at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, saw the feet and legs of a man on the floor through the open door. She thought it discovered Bonnano dead.

The identity of the old man was eshimself found in a picket of his coat like this: last night. Detectives who followed this Hone ciue found his nephew, Nocito Sicismondo, of No. 33 Orchard street. Through Sicismondo an effort is being treated by old Bonnano for ailments during the past month.

Here for 19 Years.

Sicismondo said his uncle was sixty astery which was afterward abolished. He became a carpenter later, but about nineteen years ago he journeyed to America.

Tiring of carpentry about a year ago Bonanno had taken up faith healing. He went back to Sicily, but returned ter and rented a room in Mulberry street. Italians in that part of the city knew he had been a monk and were fond of him. He was not known to have an enemy and there is a belief in some quarters that he was marked for death for some secrets learned when he was in Sicily, and that his slayers either followed him to this country or were assigned to their bloody task by orders from Sicily.

Here's How Homely Girls Can "Think" Themselves HAFFEN'S WIFE Into Venuses of Dazzling, Youthful Beauty

They Needn't Use Paint or Powder, Either; Just Cut Out Spiteful Talk and Think Sweet Thoughts.

Squints and Freckles to Disappear Under Hesthetic Physical Culture

Don't look at a girl's pink cheeks and wonder if she paints

Not to be beautiful is to cry to the world that one has lived a discordant life.

Women are like the trees of the forest-if they are not beautiful it is because they have been deprived of sufficient space and sunlight.

It is impossible to play a sonata on a piano that is out of tune, and it is impossible to be beautiful if one's thoughts are not pure and sweet.

spiritual From the philosophy of Mrs. Ivah de Chippenham Berg, Aesthetic Physical Culturist

True beauty consists of three parts-physical, mental and

With the first whisperings of spring and the primal moving of the vernal sap, in from Chicago, has blown Mrs. Ivah de Chippenham Berg (of the Illinois de Chippenham Bergs, you know). In addition to her name Mrs. de C. B. is burdened with a mission and a title, the last being: "Aesthetic Physical Culturist"-no less.

Aesthetic Physical Culture not being a thing that hitherto has had much of a run hereabouts, it might be well to make an explanation. Aesthetic Physical Culture is to think beautiful thoughts while exercising.

Simple, isn't it? Mrs. Ivah de Chippenham Berg, however, doesn't think it is as easy as it sounds to touch the tips of your toes with outing to the theory, the father or husgirthy around the tropics, so she has opened a violet and primrose studio at No. 19 East Fifty-ninth street, where the beautiful thoughts are handed Perhaps that his way to the Canal or Grand street accounts some for the homely bunch along Broadway these days.

It is really the simplest thing in the world to become beautiful if you follow Mrs. de Berg's instructions. For instance, if a lady feels "all upset" hast seen and the Twenty-ninth street over things in general she had beffer run right to the plane and pound out mement would not consume more some lively little thing or hunt up a good picture and look at it; for by nursing that grouch her good looks are wearing off as fast as a new subway guard loses his human attributes.

Then, too, the Aesthetic Culturist can spread joy wherever she goes-

Test to Be Made of Music's Effect on Human Subject by Odd Machine James E. Homans, who is a member of the National Society of Musical Therapeutics, is going to bind a young person-sex unstated-to a queer musical machine of his own devising in Carnegie Hall to-morrow night and size up how the said young person is affected by the various kinds of harmonies that will be distilled by his lyrical apparatus.

According to the sort of melody handed out by the machine, so will the heart and pulse action of the subject vary, says Mr. Homans, and in order that there may be no mistake as to just how "The Merry Widow" affects different folks, that long suffering collection of notes will be juggled in new harmonies through the musical kaleidoscope that Mr. Homans built.

This should interest many, especially as barrel organs are just waking from the winter of much content.

Mulcahey told Magistrate Cornell that five weeks ago to day he had been called to the Wost Forty-seventh street house and told that the young woman had swallowed six tablets of bichloride of mercury. A doctor was in attendance and said she was out of danger and no ambulance was called, but when the young woman was taken to Flower Hospital the policeman had been ordered to keep her under surveillance. When Dr. Allen told the Magistrate that Miss Beauvais had been in the habit of taking the bichloride of mercury in tablet form and there was no attempt at suicide, merely an overdose, the Magistrate formally discharged her from custody. from custody.

It them appeared that the young woman is a private patient at the hospital, and that bringing her to court was for the purpose of having her removed from the aspionage of the police. Information as to her personality was denied.
